HISTORICAL FICTION

The Tenth Gift

Jane Johnson

As an end to an affair with a married man, Julia Lovat receives a book that will change her life. The book, filled with 17th-century embroidery patterns, belonged to a woman named Catherine Ann Tregenna. Cramped writing in its margins tells the story of how "Cat" and others were stolen from their Cornish church in 1625 by Muslim pirates and taken on a brutal voyage to Morocco to be auctioned off as slaves. Captivated, Julia sets off to North Africa to determine the authenticity of the book and to uncover more of Cat's story. There, in the company of a charismatic guide, Julia discovers buried secrets that link her to Cat, and Morocco.

Based on the author's own ancestors, this historical is an exciting, mesmerizing and witty page-turner.

YOUNG ADULT

Prom Dates From Hell

Rosemary Clement-Moore

Maggie Quinn has "gifts" that she doesn't want. Her ability to see future events mostly comes to her in dreams. When someone at her school makes a deal with a demon, Maggie needs to check in with her grandma for help using the family tools in fighting evil. The assistance of Justin, a cute college boy, and Maggie's own determination will hopefully swing the balance to the side of good.

A fun, entertaining story with great dialogue and charming characters.

ROMANCE

Simply Perfect

Mary Balogh

Claudia Martin, headmistress and owner of Miss Martin's School for Girls, does not expect to find love and marriage in her well-ordered life until Joseph, the Marquess of Attingsborough, requests her help in guiding his illegitimate daughter. Their friendship gradually grows into love, but their different social classes could prevent them from finding true happiness together.

This warm, delightful book completes the "Simply" series. Claudia and Joseph are endearing characters and make a great romantic couple. Characters from the earlier books are reintroduced and add more charm to the story line. A great escape read!

Queen of Babble Gets Hitched

Meg Cabot

Lizzie is left in charge of the bridal shop while Monsieur Henri recovers from a heart attack. Her recent restoration of a notable bride's gown has drawn attention to the shop. Along with Lizzie's sudden professional success, her ex-boyfriend Luke has proposed to her. Now, Lizzie faces some tough choices. Should she try to make Chez Henri into her ideal shop? Should she be happy Luke proposed, or could there be someone else who would make her happier?

Let go of the wanting to read all the little introductory pieces that begin each chapter and then this book will become extremely enjoyable. If you feel compelled to read all the historical facts and the wedding tips, you may find a few extra laughs but it will also read a little choppy.

Remember Me?

Sophie Kinsella

Lexi Smart awakens with amnesia in a hospital room after an accident. She can't remember the past three years or how she changed from a poor single, struggling, working girl to one that is now successful and married to a gorgeous millionaire!

A fun and entertaining novel with the reader knowing what the ending will be soon after the story has started. This is a perfect, cheery escape read! Lexi is a delightful, sympathetic character as she struggles to re-connect with her current life. The reader will constantly keep pushing her to "remember."

...All the Best in Reading!

FICTION

The Gathering

Anne Enright

One of twelve Hegarty children, 39-year-old Veronica grieves for the loss of her brother Liam, whom she feels that she loved the best, after he commits suicide. As her family gathers for his wake and funeral, Veronica ponders what sent him to his early grave and why she is not as damaged as he was.

A dark and disturbing, yet brilliantly elegant read. With emotion that seeps from the pages, Enright's story of a family that is too large, child abuse, and Veronica's surreal imaginings of her family's past will haunt the reader from the early pages of the book until long after the last words are read.

SUSPENSE

The Ghost War

Alex Berenson

CIA agent John Wells' assignment to stop an international threat to American security takes him undercover with the Taliban in Afghanistan. There, he discovers vital information of a mole in the CIA who is helping the Chinese become more of a world power. How will John be able to stop this plot that threatens the country's safety?

Wow! The author has created another high-action, intense, very plausible and realistic thriller! John Wells is a sympathetic yet tortured and flawed character that the author continues to develop. The reader can't help but urge John forward to uncover the truth.

Where Are You Now?

Mary Higgins Clark

Carolyn's brother disappeared 10 years ago, but he always calls home once a year on Mother's Day to let everyone know that he is well. This year, after his yearly call, Carolyn is determined to find him. As she investigates, she discovers a connection between her brother's disappearance and that of several missing women. Could her brother be a murderer?

Another winner by the author! This suspenseful page-turner with loads of twists and turns in the plot will not disappoint any fans. Clark continues to produce well-plotted, enjoyable suspense thrillers with little sex and extreme violence.

MYSTERY

Envy the Night

Michael Koryta

For the first time in seven years, Frank Temple III returns to his family's remote Wisconsin lakeside cabin after being warned that the man who betrayed his father would be returning there. Can Frank forgive and forget, or will he succumb to his past?

Complex characters and a strong sense of place draw the reader into the story. Koryta peels off layer after layer of the story until the reader is left with the ultimate good vs. evil ending. Not part of the Lincoln Perry series. Koryta is as good as any of the big name authors.

Oscar Wilde and a Death of No Importance

Gyles Bandreth

Oscar Wilde stumbles upon the murdered body of his friend Billy Wood, a poor, young and beautiful boy who worked as a model for painters. After contacting the police, Oscar realizes that Billy's body has gone missing and his brutal murder goes uninvestigated until, despite police warnings to stay out of it, Oscar and his friend, the poet Robert Sherard, proceed to solve the case.

A fabulous first in a planned trilogy. Outstanding historical details and an atmospheric setting make this Victorian era mystery stand out. Based on actual events, this murder served as inspiration for Wilde's novel The Picture of Dorian Gray.

Unspoken

Mari Jungstedt

When an alcoholic photographer and a teen girl are both murdered, Detective Anders Knutas suspects that the two are related, especially when he discovers explicit photos of the girl in the photographer's darkroom. He is helped by a local TV journalist who is involved in an extramarital affair.

The second in a series, this book delves more deeply into the personal lives of its characters and the twist at the end is completely unexpected.
